

DISABILITY ALERT

DISABILITY ALERT is a commentary on topics of current interest – usually topics relating to planning for individuals with disabilities and changes to current tax and social assistance legislation. Professional advice should be obtained before acting on any of this information.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT, ASSET OWNERSHIP AND LEGAL CAPACITY

Structuring the overall finances of individuals with disabilities is a tricky job. Too often integrated financial planning is ignored even though Henson trusts, social assistance and perhaps even an RDSP have all been put in place. The missing ingredient is a plan that brings everything together.

I have prepared the attached chart, Individuals with Disabilities, Financial Support, Asset Ownership and Legal Capacity, to illustrate important choices in the big picture. The components are first divided between individuals with disabilities who are legally competent and those who are not. Then there is a further break down between those who are self supporting and those who are not. Finally, each of these areas and situations are then expanded on in terms of Day to Day Financial Support, Long Term Financial Support and Property Ownership and Legal Capacity.

Planning for individuals with disabilities with cognitive issues is quite different than planning for those who are legally competent. The major problem for those with cognitive issues is that they are unlikely to be able to own property, make a will or control their finances. Ownership of their assets usually must vest in a trust or in someone else but should be structured so that trust assets eventually pass to other family members (when no longer needed) tax efficiently and as easily as possible.

All is not Black and White

Most individuals with disabilities will qualify for the benefits of the social assistance. Some will choose to take it or must take it to meet their financial needs. Others will choose not to receive social assistance because it is not necessary and if taken would constrain the quality of life which otherwise would be available.

Take a look at the attached chart to see where you or an individual with disabilities in your family fits. Perhaps they qualify for social assistance, perhaps they don't, perhaps they can own property or maybe they cannot. What is important is to examine the constraints of each situation and then go to work on a comprehensive and long term financial plan.
